From the Vice-Chancellor's Desk

A University makes its mark in the academic arena not only through quality teaching at the Undergraduate and the Master's levels but also through its research activities in various fields of study. Research conducted by the faculty and research scholars in the different university departments in their respective specialized areas contribute significantly towards determining the status that the university enjoys in the highly competitive and quality-oriented academic world. Besides making academic contributions leading to the advancement of knowledge, research programmes of a university can be of considerable applied value in terms of generation of manpower, enhancement of managerial skills, industrial innovations, pollution control, medical breakthroughs, etc.

Since its inception in 1994, Assam University has paid special attention to the advancement of research in the fields of humanities, social sciences, science, commerce, management and other streams of study. The faculty and research scholars of the University have received and participated in a large number of highly prestigious national as well as international research projects and programmes such as fellowships, associateships and grants. The University has also been able to attract students from the SAARC countries under ICCR scheme. Several collaborative programmes with reputed Indian as well as international agencies and institutions are also being pursued in the different departments of the University.

The University has adopted the latest guidelines of the University Grants Commission while conducting the admission Ph.D. programmes from 2017 onwards. The University has also adopted the Choice-Based Credit System (CBCS) of study at the undergraduate and post-graduate levels in the University. The admission process for Ph.D. programmes have been made fully online as per the guidelines of the University Grants Commission. Assam University has taken steps for publication of Examination Results including Admit Card, Marksheets, etc. on online. In this regard, it must be mentioned that all examination related matters of the University are now dealt with online. The Silchar and Diphu Campuses are now completely wi-fi enabled campuses which help the Scholars/ Researchers in their research activities in the University.

Keeping in view the increasing number of applicants choosing Assam University as the place where they would like to conduct their research, the University administration is trying its utmost to provide necessary facilities such as health centre, post office, bank services, stores having goods and provisions, gymnasium, playground, central library and transportation facilities. The process of office automation especially in the field of academic activities has been initiated and the entire campus is being covered by networking facilities. More hostels are coming up for students and a few are already in the process of being constructed.

Besides the Silchar Campus, the satellite campus at Diphu in Karbi Anglong district is also making great strides with regard to research activities in various academic departments. Facilities similar to those provided to the scholars in the Silchar Campus are also being made available to the scholars in the satellite campus. These include networking facilities, canteen, health centre, bank and transport facilities, which are being created with financial support from the Government of India.

I take this opportunity to congratulate our students, faculties and administrative employees of the University on their achievements. I also give a hearty welcome to the new batch of research scholars who are about to join the University and wish them all success in their endeavour.

ACADEMIC DEPARTMENTS

RABINDRANATH TAGORE SCHOOL OF LANGUAGES & CULTURAL STUDIES

Department of Linguistics

The Department of Linguistics came into being in 1995 with the aim of developing a better understanding of language study and linguistics. With the diverse linguistic scenario in North East India providing its backdrop, the thrust of the department's endeavour has been on analyzing the languages of North East India with special reference to the languages of South Assam. The department is also giving importance to the study of endangered languages of the North East India as a lot of minority languages are spoken in this part of the country which is considered to be endangered so that we can do something meaningful to preserve these languages. All the North Eastern languages show dialectal variations which need to be studied structurally as well as sociolinguistically. Such studies would help the standardization of languages and pave the ways for their use in education and other fields of socio-cultural life of North East India. Keeping this in view, the department has developed its course curriculum in such a way so as to enable the students at the Post Graduate level to acquire special knowledge to take up independent researches in future on various languages/dialects and their recent developments.

CENTRE FOR BIODIVERSITY AND NATURAL RESOURCE CONSERVATION

Aim and Objectives of the Centre

Biological diversity is fundamental to the fulfilment of human needs. An environment which is rich in biological diversity, offers the broadest array of options for sustaining human welfare and for adapting to change. The Barak Valley falling in Assam in the Northeast India belongs to the Indo- Burma Hotspots, and one of the most biological diverse regions of the world. Barak Valley constitutes 8.9% geographical area of the state covering an area of 6922 sq km. the land use/land cover area of the valley may be characterized by evergreen forest, semi evergreen forest, mixed moist deciduous forest, scrub forest, degraded forest, agricultural land and tea plantations. Barak Valley has 12 Reserve forests, (RFs) and one Wildlife Sanctuary (WLS). The Valley is richly endowed with plant and animal resources, which needs to be managed on a sustainable basis to serve as the main driver of development in the area. The sustainable development of any area depends on the proper utilization of its natural resources.

The Centre for Biodiversity and Natural Resources Conservation attached to the department Ecology & Environmental Science is mandated to carry out research works pertaining to biodiversity conservation and effective and scientific management of the natural resources of the valley with the following aim and objectives:

- To study the ecology and conservation of flora and fauna of Barak Valley.
- To study the landscape ecology in the Barak Valley.
- To study the natural resource utilization pattern and management by the traditional communities of Barak Valley.
- To study the biophysical parameters in major ecosystems.
- To document indigenous knowledge system of the region.
